1. Summary

> A calm, mixed day as Americans voted in the midterm elections: the S&P 500 up about 0.4% and the Nasdaq about 0.8% on a chip rebound, the Dow down. The S&P 500 is about 3% below its high; the Nasdaq is still below its 200-day average and the VIX about 21. A pullback, not a panic; the bargains are still in the sold-off software and data names.

S&P 500	VIX	Above 200-day average	Near 52-week high / low
7,560.63	20.8	61%	62 / 6
+0.3% today, -3.3% from high	-1.9% today	of S&P 500 stocks	of 503

- Indices: the S&P 500 is about 3% below its high and up about 10.5% this year; the Nasdaq is about 8% below its high after its worst month since March 2025.
- Pressure: oil is near $103 and the US 10-year yield near 4.9%, both up sharply this year.
- Fear: the VIX jumped about 13% to about 19.4, still a normal level.
- Opportunity: software and data names sold off on AI fears still have growing earnings and are near decade-low valuations.

Stocks to look at (the screener's cheapest first): ZTS, ADBE, ALL, NEM, IT, CMCSA, FSLR, INTU, VLO, XYL.

Stage 1 sorts each company into one of Lynch's six categories and keeps those that pass every financial-statement rule for their category (banks, insurers and REITs by their own rules). Stage 2 sets each survivor's cheap price: EPS times the lower of the bottom quarter of its own yearly P/E over 10 years (6 years at least) and its sector's median P/E. EPS is Yahoo's adjusted EPS for the closest names in each sector, diluted EPS otherwise. "Cheap" is at or below that price; "close" is within 15% above it. Trend is timing only, not a rule. Details and every rule's source: report 13 and docs/SCREENER.md. Check each name before acting.

3. Analysis

What is driving the market

On Nov 3 (intraday) the S&P 500 rose about 0.4% to about 7,570 and the Nasdaq about 0.8%, led by chips ahead of AMD's results, while the Dow slipped about 0.3% and Apple fell after its results. Polls favour Democrats to take the House; JPMorgan expects a small dip on a Democratic sweep and others a rally if Republicans keep both chambers. On Nov 2 (intraday, as Wall Street now closes at 22:00 Italy time) oil fell about 7% to about $97 on Middle East ceasefire hopes, the Dow rose about 0.6% and the S&P 500 slipped about 0.3% to about 7,560, with the Nasdaq down about 0.7%. The VIX rose to about 21. This week brings Apple's results (tonight), the US midterm elections, the monthly jobs report, and from the watch list Booking (Nov 3) and Uber (Nov 4). On Oct 30 the S&P 500 fell about 1.8% to about 7,580 and the Nasdaq about 2.9%, the worst day for both since June; the Dow lost about 1.1%. Intel fell about 29%, its worst day since 1974, on weak fourth-quarter guidance, after Alphabet's results (Oct 28) and other tech reports raised doubts about the return on AI spending. Earlier in the week, on Oct 28, the S&P 500 was about 7,747, under 1% from its high. On Oct 27 the S&P 500 rose about 0.7% to about 7,730 and the Nasdaq about 1.3%, led by chips and Big Tech ahead of their earnings and this week's Fed meeting. Oil topped $100 a barrel in September on Middle East supply worries, and the 10-year yield broke 5% for the first time since 2023 on inflation fears and the chance of Fed rate rises. The index has held up because the largest companies keep growing earnings, but breadth is middling: a little under 60% of S&P 500 stocks are above their 200-day average.

The stocks to look at 173 of the 497 S&P 500 companies pass Stage 1 (good financial statements for their Lynch category), and 27 of those are cheap or close to cheap: the top 3 in each of 13 sectors.

- Cheapest against their own history: Adobe, Zoetis, Allstate, Intuit and First Solar sit about 40-55% below their cheap price. Adobe and Intuit are the same AI-fear names the October 25 screen found, now confirmed by the statement checks.
- Check before trusting: Allstate (5.4x) and Comcast (6.2x) look cheap because recent earnings are unusually high (a light catastrophe year; one-off gains), and Valero's refining margins are at a peak with oil near $100. Cyclicals look cheapest exactly when earnings peak.
- On the watch list too: Booking is in the list (fast grower, about 15% below its cheap price on adjusted EPS). Alphabet and Uber, new on the watch list, are not.

Each name still needs step 1 (absolute values with history) before any decision.

What to watch

- Oil and the 10-year yield: a move back below 4.5% would ease the pressure on valuations.
- Earnings season continues, with BKNG (Nov 3) and UBER (Nov 4) from the watch list; BSX and GOOGL reported Oct 28.
