1. Summary

> The strongest balance sheet and biggest cash generator in online travel, the cheapest it has been in a decade, sold off on fears that AI agents will bypass it. View: start a position now and add below about $145 (15x adjusted earnings).

Price	Adjusted P/E, 12m	10-year median P/E	Entry at 15x
$154.18	16.0x	21.2x	$144.15 7% below today's price

- Cheap: about 16x adjusted earnings, against a 10-year norm of about 21x.
- Strong: passes every strict debt rule and generates about $9.5bn of free cash flow a year.
- Weak: negative shareholders' equity because of buybacks.
- Uncertain: room-night growth is slowing, and AI agents and regulators are open risks.

3. Analysis

Adjusted P/E against its own 10-year history

Year	Average price	Adjusted EPS	P/E
Now (12m)	$154.18	$9.61	16.0x
2025	$206.52	$9.14	22.6x

2019	$74.85	$4.13	18.1x
2018	$78.76	$3.72	21.2x
2017	$71.93	$3.09	23.3x
2016	$53.87	$2.80	19.2x

Median of the yearly P/E: 21.2x over 10 years, 21.2x over the last 5.

Adjusted EPS: Yahoo's reported quarterly EPS (the basis analysts use, without amortization and one-offs), split-adjusted. Last four quarters, by report date: Oct 2025 $3.98, Feb 2026 $1.95, Apr 2026 $1.14, Aug 2026 $2.54. Full-year EPS is the trailing figure at the Q4 report; P/E uses the year's average price. The chart shows the daily price over the trailing adjusted EPS known that day.

Entry price

At 15x trailing adjusted EPS of $9.61, the entry price is $144.15, 7% below today's price. The 10-year range of yearly P/E is 18.1x to 366.6x (years of collapsed earnings, such as 2020, show very high P/Es). Next report 2026-11-03 (EPS estimate $4.50); if met, the entry price becomes $151.95.

Target: Proposed 2026-10-25 (report 12), not yet confirmed by Babak: below the 18x decade low, a discount for the AI-agent risk.

Business

Booking runs Booking.com, Priceline, Agoda, KAYAK and OpenTable. Most of its profit comes from hotel and alternative-accommodation commissions, mainly in Europe. Results are still growing: Q2 2026 adjusted EPS of $2.54 beat the $2.43 consensus and grew 15%. It returns about 10% of its market value to shareholders each year through buybacks and dividends. The stock split 25-for-1 in April 2026.

Risks

- AI agents: assistants that book travel directly (Meta's Muse agent, Sep 23) could cut Booking out of the customer relationship.

- Slowing volume: room-night growth fell from 8–9% in 2025 to 5% in Q2 and a guided 3–5% in Q3.
- Regulators: an EU Digital Services Act probe (Oct 21), reported FTC action over affiliate hotel ads (Oct 7), and the EU court upholding the ETraveli block (Sep 9).

News

- 2026-11-02: about $154 (intraday: since the US clocks changed on Nov 1, Wall Street closes at 22:00 Italy time, after this run), up about 4% ahead of tomorrow's report (Nov 3, after the US close). Consensus adjusted EPS about $4.48 (+13%) on revenue of about $9.56bn; guidance was revenue +4-6%. Booking has beaten estimates four quarters running. The stock is now about 7% above the $144 entry.
- 2026-10-30: about $148, little changed and about 3% above the $144 entry, ahead of Tuesday's (Nov 3) report.
- 2026-10-28: about $148, another step down ahead of the Nov 3 report; now about 3% above the $144 entry.
- 2026-10-27: a new 52-week low near $150 intraday, closing about $150. Options imply about a 6% move on the Nov 3 report. Wells Fargo cut its target to $190 (Equal Weight); BofA ($232) and BTIG ($250) keep Buy.
- The stock is down about 29% this year, most of it since late August.
- Q3 results are due Nov 3; consensus adjusted EPS is about $4.49.

What to watch

- Q3 on Nov 3: room nights against the 3–5% guide and early 2027 commentary.
- Management's view of traffic from AI agents, any FTC provision, and whether buybacks stay near $4bn a quarter.

Caveats

- Yahoo data is unofficial; capex can include acquisitions or stakes, so check SEC capex.
- The peer group is hand-picked, so the weighted scores depend on it.
- Claude's notes are dated above and may be older than the numbers.
